1. Summary
The tourism industry in Japan is a main service since it is a popular tourist destination. Japan has its own culture and atmosphere, that you can only experience here, which attracts many tourists from other countries. In fact, the number of tourists visiting has been increasing from the past few years until now. However, in here we would like to concentrate on the outbound tourism in Japan. There are many tourists that came to visit Japan but fewer people are going out for travelling, so we would like to investigate about the reasons that stop people from going out for international tourism.

2. Contents
First, we will talk about the tourism industry in Japan, mainly about what attracts foreign visitors to Japan, or what has Japanese services industry done to entertain these tourists, and what kind of effect has it brought to Japan. Later, we will focus on the differences between inbound and outbound tourism in Japan, and specifically on why Japanese people do not take days off to go on a vacation. Finally, in the end we will focus on other Asian countries.

4. Conclusion

In conclusion, we can assume that Japan is a good country to visit. The people, food, culture, and environment are very good, even for people who came to Japan for the first time, who should be able to enjoy it, and leave satisfied with their stay in Japan. But for outbound tourism, we can conclude it is made harder because of the social system currently in place.
