In this seminar I will introduce the educational principles of Inoue Enryo, philosopher and founder of Toyo University in Tokyo. Toyo University was founded in 1887, and Enryo first established it as the "Philosophy Academy" at the very young age of 29. Although he was an educator more than a century ago, his educational ideals can be a reference for us today. Not only that, it may be said that he anticipated the challenges that higher education is currently facing. I would like to touch on some of the contemporary educational issues that especially Japanese universities are facing.
