TOYO UNIVERSITY

Inheriting the "Spirit of Philosophy"

Toyo University's history started with the Philosophy Academy founded by Enryo Inoue in 1887.
What has been passed down over the 130 years since then is a spirit of having one's own philosophy, thinking deeply to get to the essence of things, and striving to overcome any difficulty.

What is Toyo University?

Toyo University has a student body population of almost 30,000 individuals, enrolled in 15 different faculties, supporting a wide variety of educational opportunities. While inheriting the philosophy of its founder, Enryo Inoue, as the foundation of its education, the university has continually taken on social challenges and evolved with the times. Our diverse curriculum offered, along with our global network, highly successful employment support system for students, and more, supports each student's wishes while guiding them toward their own achievable reality

Doctrine and Progress

The three doctrines that Toyo University's educational principles are based upon are, "Possessing one's own philosophy," "Seeking the true meaning behind matters," and "Proactively taking up the mantle of solving societal issues." In the face of expanding globalization and computerization, existing values are found to be in conflict, with it becoming more difficult to define things. Our three doctrines are essential to facing these issues head-on. Toyo University has responded to the changing of times, continued to set our gazes on the challenges of a changing world, and foster new talent capable of rising to meet the challenges of current and future generations.

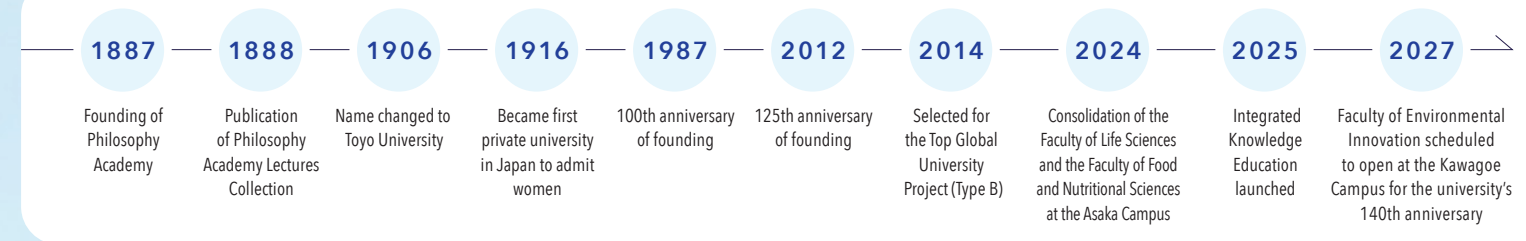

Fostering a Convergence of Knowledge

In a society that will continue to undergo rapid changes, the ability we must acquire is the capacity to think deeply and from multiple perspectives, to integrate our own knowledge with that of others, and to make comprehensive judgments. At Toyo University, we refer to this form of knowledge as "integrated knowledge." In 2025, the university launched its "Integrated Knowledge Education" curriculum, in which students build on the specialized learning of their faculty and independently combine it with learning from other fields to create their own learning.

Support for academic fees, daily living, and employment

Toyo University maintains a support system to ensure that international students can study and live in Japan with peace of mind. For example, the university offers a system that reduces or exempts the equivalent of 30% of annual tuition fees as well as various unique scholarships for international students who pay their own expenses. As for daily living, Toyo university has two international residences where Japanese and international students live together and interact with one another. In addition, the university also provides a full range of programs for business Japanese language education and other skills necessary for employment in Japan.

Toyo University's founder Enryo Inoue

Enryo Inoue was born in 1858 as the eldest son of a temple priest in Niigata Prefecture. He first encountered philosophy when he entered the newly founded University of Tokyo. With the founding spirit that "the foundation of all learning lies in philosophy," he established Shiritsu Tetsugakuran (Philosophy Academy), the predecessor of Toyo University, at the young age of 29. Sensing the need to educate the masses, Enryo worked to free them from groundless superstitions by using yokai (apparitions) that were familiar to people of the time. He spoke continuously across the country about the importance of thinking and making judgments for oneself, and opened the door to education for people with no surplus money and time. Enryo traveled around the world three times and devoted his entire life to spreading philosophy and education. In 1919, while giving a lecture in Dalian, China, he collapsed and died at the age of 61.

Four Years on the Same Campus

Toyo University has four distinctive campuses, each serving as a stage for the journey of knowledge.

Students can build their learning over four years at the campuses they belong to, while also engaging with learning at other campuses according to their interests.

In 2027, the Faculty of Environmental Innovation* is scheduled to open at the Kawagoe Campus.

Collaborating with the Faculty of Science and Engineering and the Faculty of Information Sciences and Arts, also based in Kawagoe, the Kawagoe Campus will be reborn as "Komorebi-no-Mori no Campus"—a center for pursuing new scientific frontiers

- At the time of enrollment procedures, the required payment consists of the "admission fee" and "half of the tuition (excluding the admission fee)."
- The Admission fee is charged in the first year only.
- The admission fee (enrollment deposit) once paid is regarded as payment for acquiring the right to enroll in the faculty, department, or course to which the applicant has been admitted at Toyo University. Therefore, it will not be refunded under any circumstances, including in the event of admission withdrawal. The documents submitted will also not be returned.
- The tuition mentioned above is the amount before the 30% tuition reduction. The figures in parentheses indicate the payment amount after receiving a 30% tuition reduction.
- Transfers from financial institutions outside Japan are not accepted.
- At the time of enrollment procedures, please pay the full tuition amount. If a tuition reduction is granted after enrollment, the reduced amount will be refunded. From the fall semester onward, tuition will be billed in advance at a reduced rate according to the tuition reduction percentage, provided that you meet the academic and other eligibility criteria. For details on eligibility to receive the tuition reduction, see "Support Schemes for International Students."
- The amounts listed above are provisional and may be subject to change.
- The above table includes payment information for all faculties and departments. Available faculties and departments vary depending on the type of entrance examination.
- Students enrolling in the Faculty of Letters' Department of History must pay an additional academic fee of 6,000 yen.
- Students enrolling in the Faculty of Sociology's Department of Global Diversity Studies will participate in a one-week "globaldiversity exercise" either in Japan or abroad during their first year. They must therefore make a separate payment to cover associated expenses (e.g., for transport, accommodations, educational materials, meals, etc.) amounting to approximately 100,000 yen for an exercise in Japan and approximately 300,000 to 400,000 yen for an exercise abroad (or approximately 350,000 to 400,000 yen for students desiring a long-term program).
- Depending on your course registration and affiliation after enrollment, additional fees for various lab sessions may be required.
- Tuition and fees may change for students who exceed the designated length of the course of study.
- Please refer to the Toyo University website for the latest fee information.

An environment for learning and living with a peace of mind

Supporting employment after graduation and daily living

Toyo University provides various support schemes and international residences to ensure that international students can study and live in Japan with a peace of mind.

★ Entrance Examinations Eligible for the Toyo SDGs Ambassador Program for International Students (See pages 11–12)

This program recognizes privately financed international students who demonstrate strong motivation and capacity to contribute to the global community in various ways aligned with the Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs). Selected students are officially certified as Toyo University SDGs International Student Ambassadors and receive support with tuition fees, housing, and other needs.

Eligibility for Support

Applicants must be privately financed international students who meet all of the following criteria:

①

Have the desire and ability to contribute to global society in various ways toward the achievement of the SDGs;

②

Will be actively involved in SDG-related activities and other globalization-linked activities inside and outside the University;

③

Have a high level of English proficiency;

④

Have a clear career plan including a postgraduate one.

Support Details

①

Tuition Support (Grant equivalent to admission fee, general facility and equipment fee, and lab fee; tuition may be reduced by up to 100% through a combination of merit-based reductions and this grant), waiver of other miscellaneous fees

②

Housing Support (Guaranteed placement in university housing such as AI-House or the International Hall)

③

Living and Activity Support

④

Japanese Language Proficiency Support

*Recipients are not required to repay the financial support received, even after graduation (however, continuation from the second year onward is subject to evaluation based on academic performance and engagement in SDGs-related activities).
